Internet Resources:

FetLife. www.fetlife.com is a free social network for the BDSM and fetish community. It's similar to Facebook and MySpace but run by kinky people. There are dozens of groups you can join that feature intelligent, thoughtful, and provocative discussions on polyamory and other styles of non-monogamy.

Franklin's Poly Pages. www.xeromag.com/fvpoly.html. This site is widely regarded as a most authoritative set of online advice on polyamory. It takes a fun and pragmatic tone and covers subjects that are not well-covered in the books, like mono/poly relationships and being a secondary.

Freaksexual. freaksexual.wordpress.com. Freaksexual is a wonderful blog in which Pepper deals intelligently and accessibly with issues surrounding polyamory and sexuality. The entries are more essays than posts. They're excellent reading regardless of how well acquainted you are with polyamory, but they're particularly valuable if you're just starting out.

OkCupid. www.okcupid.com. This free personals site has a very strong matching system and a kink-friendly and bi-friendly approach. This is not specifically a polyamory or non-monogamy site, but the matching is flexible and as a result, if you are non-monogamous, your top matches will share your style.

Polymatchmaker. www.polymatchmaker.com. This is the premier polyamory-specific personals site, with a good set of discussion forums and a strong mix of members, including queer folks and couples.

PolyWeekly Podcast. www.polyweekly.com. These are a series of half-hour radio-show-style segments on polyamory. They can be downloaded or streamed. The host, Minx, is charming and engaging, and the audio format allows her to cover a lot of territory. Most of the shows are on polyamory how-to subjects, but she also mixes in interviews and erotica readings.

Practical Polyamory. www.practicalpolyamory.com. This is the web site of polyamory skills educator and advocate, Anita Wagner. This is site a great poly resource center. It features polyamory programs, a blog, downloadable documents, media resources, and referrals to poly-friendly therapists.
